

DETROIT, MICH.
FREE PRESS

Approved For Release 2004/01/16 : CIA-RDP75-00149R000500050025-8

MORNING 550,000
SUNDAY 600,014

Blab Hazard

SENATOR Eugene J. McCarthy (D., Minn.) is unhappy that Congress doesn't know more of the back-alley minutia of the Central Intelligence Agency's espionage activities. The Senator, and the rest of Congress, had better be content with the generalities of over-all performance. Spy work demands the utmost in secretiveness. Individual agents working on the same covert project often don't know each other or even precisely what they're trying to get at. Any loosening of this security would render the CIA just about useless, and Congressmen are notorious for letting cats out of bags.

Eugene J. McCarthy